WHAT’S A CAUCUS, ANYWAY?

“Caucuses are private meetings run by political parties. They’re held at the county, district, or precinct level. In most, participants divide themselves into groups according to the candidate they support. Undecided voters form their own group. Each group gives speeches supporting its candidate and tries to get others to join its group. At the end, the number of voters in each group determines how many delegates each candidate has won.” usa.gov

A delegate is someone chosen to represent their precinct or state at a national political convention. A pledged delegate must support the candidate chosen by the voters they represent. Democratic and Republican caucuses differ. In the Democratic caucus, voters group by candidate they support. In the Republican caucus, participants just cast a vote.
